Dear Campus Community,

This week's sixth round of pooled surveillance testing for COVID-19 yielded no positive cases.

The results were returned from SUNY Upstate Medical University from 580 samples taken Wednesday from faculty and staff.

As we enter the eighth week of classes, we are seeing the number of cases in Clinton County as a whole rise. This should prompt our attention. Continuing to follow health and safety protocols such as face coverings and social distancing remains critical.

As I have written each week, positive cases are expected and the reason for isolation, quarantine, and all of the approaches developed as part of our restart plan.

Pooled testing will continue this coming Wednesday with students. The latest data and other details are online at plattsburgh.edu/covid-19.
